PROGRAMME STRUCTURE

A sustainable approach to finance entails a critical rethinking of almost every discipline within our industry. The Executive Programme in ESG addresses this imperative by looking at banking and finance from the “ground up”, reviewing the foundations of how we operate, our assumptions and views of markets, forecasting, risk, credit, investment and more.

The programme analyses environmental, social and governance (ESG) considerations, current thinking on taxonomy and regulation and how to develop both theoretical and applied perspectives.

PROGRAMME MODULES

The programme is delivered over three modules, each of twelve weeks, with the second and third module taking a deep dive into sustainability issues.

Financial Markets, Institutions, and Instruments

Module 1 provides in-depth knowledge of key concepts and theories of financial markets, institutions, and instruments, including their structure, functions, and their role in the socio-economic environment and resource allocation.

- Defining the role of commercial bank and the banking model in society
- Central banks and alternative models in financial services
- Securities markets and their instruments

Sustainable Finance and Banking

Module 2 explores the role and structure of financial institutions in promoting sustainability, how they facilitate sustainable commercial activity and responsible investment practices.

- Banking structure & institutions
- Financial transactions in sustainable finance
- Risk management and governance
- ESG responsibility

Sustainable Finance: Concepts, Development, and Change

Module 3 evaluates developments in sustainable finance, global initiatives and treaties including the integration of environmental, social, and governance (ESG) factors into banking.

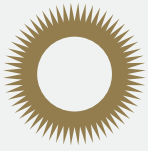

- ESG commercial environment and codes of practice & policies
- International initiatives
- Future-proofing of businesses
- Development finance
